On the Radio

For the ninth consecutive season, a slate of Georgia State baseball games will air on the Georgia State/ISP Radio Network. Games can be heard in the Atlanta area and all of North Georgia on WRAS-FM 88.5, the flagship station for Georgia State Athletics. Games can also be heard on the Internet at GeorgiaStateSports.com and WRAS.org.

Dave Cohen returns to the microphone for selected airings of Georgia State baseball in 2008. Now in his 25th season as play-by-play announcer for Georgia State men's basketball, Cohen is also in his 11th season as broadcast coordinator.

Cohen is a veteran sports reporter in Atlanta, having worked for WGST-AM 640, WCNN-AM 680, WSB-AM 750, and WGUN-AM 1010. He also works with the Furman University Football Radio Network in Greenville, S.C.

Cohen is a native of the Boston area, and a graduate of Georgia State. He and his wife Carol Cohen, the Senior Woman Administrator for Georgia State Athletics, reside in Alpharetta.

The couple has a seven-year old son Samuel, and a three-year old son, Jackson.

The 2008 season promises to be an exciting campaign for the Georgia State baseball team, as the club returns five position starters from last year's squad. The Panthers also bring back seven pitchers from the 2007 team, and add 15 newcomers to the roster.

"I really like our team," said second-year head coach Greg Frady. "Our pitching depth excites me. We have made a lot of strides in that area. Our commitment to play good team defense is getting better all the time. We are getting more stabilized, defensively, at each position with a few more options. Offensively, we are going to have more power than we have had in the last couple of years.

"I am cautiously optimistic about making predictions, like any coach. But in reality, this team has got a chance to have a very exciting and possibly historic season," added Frady. "Of course, any teams that accomplish those things and have a special season need to stay healthy. And young guys need to find their niche fast and develop and do their part. But the returners that we have and the improved pitching depth would make any coach optimistic."

Pitchers

Frady is especially excited about this season's pitching staff and its depth. Six of the seven pitchers returning this year are juniors or seniors. Additionally, four of the seven incoming pitchers bring at least one year of collegiate experience with them to Georgia State.

Junior-college transfer Robinson Polanco, redshirt senior Kenny Camp and junior Will Palmer are expected to bear the load on the weekends. "Those are high-level guys who can win every time out. When we go into a weekend, we feel really good that each day we have a competitive pitching match-up with any of those guys on the mound," Frady said. "It is a starting rotation that can give us innings."

Palmer led the Panthers with a 7-6 record in 2007, making 16 starts and throwing two complete games. The crafty lefty also led starters last season with a 5.00 ERA. Palmer pitched the best in crucial Colonial Athletic Association match-ups, posting a 5-2 record with a 3.65 ERA in nine starts against league opponents.

Camp posted a career-best 2.08 ERA last season, and held opponents to a paltry .140 batting average. Frady called the 6-foot-7 righty, who has missed several games during his collegiate career due to injuries, "the most talented pitcher on the staff."

Polanco, a 6-foot-1 lefty, brings an impressive résumé to State. The junior-college transfer finished with a combined 12-5 record and 127 strikeouts during his two years at Gloucester County (N.J.) Community College. "He's a Friday-night mentality guy," Frady said about the newcomer. "He works very, very hard and prepares himself to be a professional player."

Senior Drew Grant and junior transfer Adam Knight are the probable midweek starters, but both are capable of earning a spot on the weekend. "Both have experience and know what they need to do. They have been throwing really well," said Frady.

Grant finished the 2007 campaign with a 3-6 record and a 5.20 ERA, but suffered two one-run losses in CAA play. The senior pitched extremely well against Old Dominion in the CAA Tournament last year, giving up just one earned run in 5.2 innings.

Knight redshirted at West Georgia last year, and comes to the Panthers after a stellar junior college career. The native of Ringgold, Ga., completed his two-year career at Chattanooga State Community College with a combined 13-5 record with 11 saves, and twice earned first-team all-conference accolades.

Other pitchers on staff with starting experience for the Panthers include seniors Bobby Bennett and Robert Hasenfelt. Bennett had a strong summer playing for the Fairbanks AIA Fire of the Alaska Baseball League. The 6-foot-2 lefty finished the summer with a 3-2 record and a 2.17 ERA in 13 appearances with four starts. "Coming off a great summer, I think Bobby's going to have a year that will make a difference for us," said Frady.

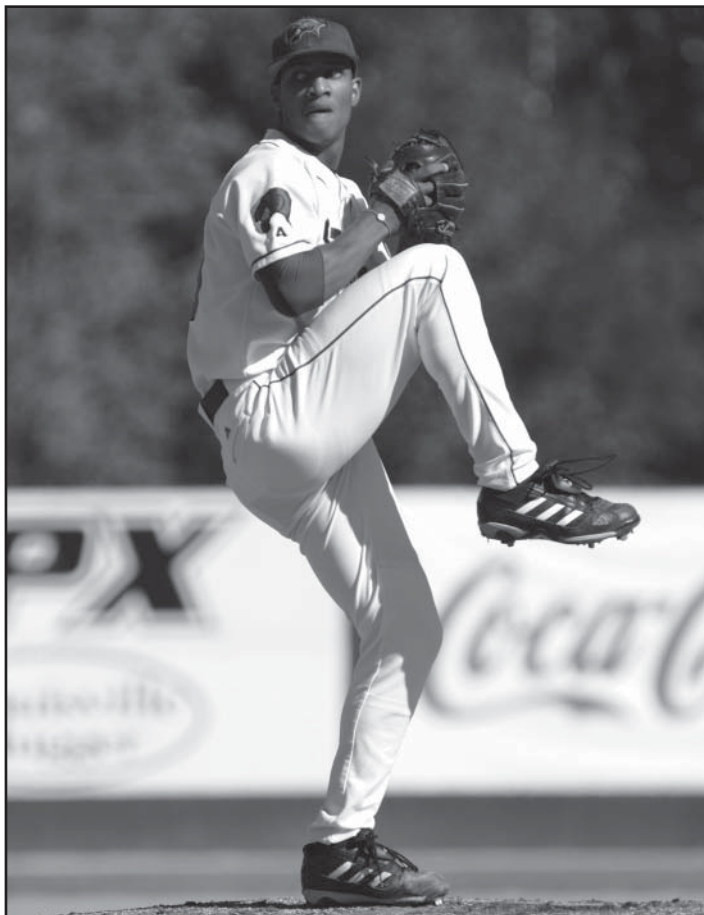

Hasenfelt had his best season as a Panther in 2007, making 15 appearances with three starts. Frady expects major contributions from a healthy Hasenfelt this year. "If Rob can stay healthy, he'll have a dramatic impact on helping us win big. He's a guy who can come in and throw the fastball by people," he said.

Redshirt junior Joel Reeves pitched exclusively in relief for State last year, picking up two wins. The native Atlantan also earned a save on the road against George Mason with three innings of scoreless work. Frady expects Reeves to get more chances in relief this season, as he has matured mentally on the mound.

Redshirt sophomore David Ferrer will start the season as the closer for the Panthers. Ferrer has struggled with injuries since coming to State, but Frady has "tremendous confidence" in the 6-foot-3 righty from Powder Springs, Ga. Frady describes his repertoire as having "tremendous run on his ball and a great breaking pitch."

Five newcomers will see time out of the bullpen this season. Freshmen Theo Asher, Will Campbell and Zach Chastain give the relief corps some new blood while sophomore Chas Skees and redshirt junior John Locklear will provide the newcomers with some experience.

Locklear comes to State after a solid season at Seminole (Fla.)

Junior Robinson Polanco is expected to be part of the weekend rotation after a stellar two-year stint at Gloucester County (N.J.) Community College.

Community College. The native of Winter Park, Fla., led Seminole with four saves in 2007 and recorded 30 strikeouts and 11 walks in 39 innings of work. "He is the rock," said Frady. "If we're going to have the big season we are talking about, John will play a very vital role in that success."

Skees pitched at Division II Faulkner University in Alabama last spring after a solid high school career at perennial Georgia power Kell High School in Cobb County. Frady said the 5-foot-11 righty has improved every day since arriving on campus.

Asher and Chastain were teammates last season at Parkview High School in Lilburn, Ga., and continue that relationship with the Panthers this year. Asher is a mature freshman and a consistent strike thrower. The veteran coach said Chastain has made improvements throughout the fall, and thinks the freshman could see time closing games.

Campbell earned his way onto the roster with a strong performance in the fall. Frady projects the native of Douglasville, Ga., to "command some opportunities early."

Catchers

The Panthers will break in a new crop of catchers this season, as none of the four have experience at the Division I level. The group features two freshmen and a pair of juniors. Freshmen Mitch Rider and Aaron Schmitz will compete with juniors Marc Mimeault and Matt Farrell for time behind the plate.

Frady projects Mimeault to be the team's opening day catcher. The native of Candiac, Quebec, comes to State after playing the last two seasons at Northeastern Oklahoma A&M Community College, where he earned back-to-back First-Team All-Region II honors. Frady expects the Canadian to be in the middle of lineup, and one of the best catchers in the Southeast this season.

Junior Marc Mimeault is projected to be the opening day catcher for the Panthers. He twice earned all-region honors at Northeastern Oklahoma A&M Community College.

Rider will also see time behind the plate and at first base. The native of Suwanee, Ga., was selected in the 47th Round by the Florida Marlins during the 2007 First-Year Player Draft, but opted to attend Georgia State. Frady described Rider as "a big time offensive player with a lot of power."

Farrell and Schmitz will see some spot duty behind the plate. Farrell, who Frady hailed as having a great work ethic, will also get chances as a left-handed pinch hitter. Schmitz is expected to fill a utility role for the Panthers, and will get a few opportunities to catch.

Infielders

Georgia State returns three of its four starting infielders from a season ago, only needing to replace its first baseman from the 2007 team. Senior Jean-Michel Rochon-Salvas has entrenched himself as a starter since his arrival in Atlanta. Shortstop Chase Childers has started the last two seasons for the Panthers, and sophomore Bradley Logan started all 58 games at third base last year.

"This is the first year that we've had depth at different positions. In the past, when a middle infielder would go down there would be no answer to what would take place next," Frady said. "All of our infielders have experience with the exception of our freshmen. But our freshmen have been coming on and proving themselves. Some of our freshmen have been pushing very hard to be the opening day starters right now."

Rochon-Salvas raised his batting average for the third straight season in 2007, finishing with a .341 average to accompany his 27 RBIs. He finished last year with 75 hits, which is tied for fifth-most during a single season at State and just two short of the record.

Frady hailed the senior as a model of consistency. "He is a very solid defensive player, and a very solid offensive player. He is extremely smart on the baseball field, and always seems to be in the right place at the right time," he said.

Childers started all 58 games a season ago and finished with a .289 average. He finished third on the team with eight steals and recorded nine doubles while driving in 34 runs. "He has a lot of physical tools with a lot of potential," Frady said.

Logan broke through last season and started all 58 games at the hot corner. He completed his rookie campaign with a .294 average, nine doubles, six home runs and 36 RBIs. "His leadership skills and his competitiveness elevate everyone around him," Frady said about the native of Augusta, Ga.

Redshirt junior Derek Simmons sat out last season at State after transferring from Division II University of Montevallo in Alabama. Simmons helped the Falcons reach the Division II World Series in 2006, and can play second or third base. Frady spoke highly of Simmons' bat, but noted that the native of Duluth, Ga., has improved the defensive aspect of his game as well.

Freshman Daniel Merck comes to State after a solid high school career at Forsyth Central in Cumming, Ga. "Daniel has got big upside and gets better every day we have practice," Frady said.

Freshmen Theo Asher and Aaron Schmitz will both see time at multiple positions. Asher is expected to contribute on the mound, but Frady said the rookie is pushing to be the team's opening day first baseman. "Theo is an absolute, rock-solid defensive first baseman. He is improving his offense every day, and is an intelligent kid who makes quick adjustments," said Frady.

Frady described Schmitz as a versatile player who can catch, but also play third and first base. The native of Lawrenceville, Ga., will also get opportunities as a pinch hitter.

Outfielders

The outfield is the deepest position on the Panther roster this season, as the squad returns three players from 2007 and adds three newcomers to the group. Junior Matt Van Horn started 39 games last season, mostly in right field. Redshirt junior Dusty Bennett made 32 starts in 2007, primarily in left field. Junior Mike McCree started 28 games a year ago, including 15 straight early in the season. Freshmen Jonathan Kolowich and Joey Wood along with junior-college transfer Nick Hogan give State a complement of three right-handed batters and three left-handed batters.

Frady is pleased with the flexibility available to him in the outfield. "Each one of our outfielders has certain talents and skill set that they bring to the team," he said. "All six of our outfielders are going to be instrumental in playing with the team. Some will contribute as offensive types, some as defensive types and some as runners. All of these guys are going to play big roles."

Frady praised Van Horn, who hit .290 with 10 doubles last season, for improving his defensive play in the off-season. "Matt has always been a hitter, but he's improved his defensive play this year so much that you feel he is going to get to every ball out there right now," said the head coach.

Bennett will get chances in every game according to Frady, and possesses the best arm in the outfield. McCree leads by example and brings a consistent approach at the plate and in the field. He hit .268 when he started 15 straight games at the beginning of last season.

Hogan has the potential to start in centerfield after two strong seasons at Pitt Community College in North Carolina. He earned First-Team All-Region X honors during his freshman and sophomore years. Frady described Hogan as a good defensive centerfielder and a leadoff hitter who works the count to get on base.

Wood, who played multiple positions at Northside High School in Columbus, Ga., is one of the quickest Panthers on the base paths. Frady expects the freshman to help State as a designated hitter and pinch runner while improving his defensive play.

Kolowich impressed Frady with his bat during the fall, but the coach says the freshman must improve his defense. "If he swings the bat well, Jonathan's going to be hard to keep out of the lineup. He has a big upside," said Frady.

Schedule

The Panthers open the 2008 schedule with a four-game series against Jackson State on Friday, Feb. 22. The home slate consists of 33 games highlighted by a 14-game homestand to open the season, and a 12-game stretch at The Field at Panthersville starting in late April.

After the opening weekend against Jackson State, State's non-conference schedule combines a mix of favorable match-ups against IPFW (Feb. 29-March 2), Tennessee Tech (March 4-5), Alabama A&M (April 1 and April 18) and Savannah State (April 23) with challenging contests against SEC and ACC powers. The Panthers conclude their 14-game, season-opening homestand against cross-town rival and ACC powerhouse Georgia Tech on March 12. State also visits SEC foes Auburn (April 8) and Georgia (April 16).

Georgia State finishes its home schedule with a midweek doubleheader against Division I newcomer Presbyterian on May 6 before closing out the season with seven straight road games, six of them against conference opponents.

The Panthers see some familiar faces from their days in the Atlantic Sun Conference. State plays home-and-home series with former conference rivals Jacksonville State (March 18-19) and Samford (April 2 and April 30). Georgia State also visits former A-Sun rival and in-state foe Mercer on March 26.

"We feel that some games on the schedule we will have favorable match-ups, and there are some games on our schedule that will test us at a very deep level," said Frady about his team's non-conference schedule. "We feel like the games prior to the CAA will help us prepare for the league schedule. Our middle of the week games are so tough and competitive that they will help us keep our competitive edge for the weekends."

As part of the 56-game schedule, State plays a 30-game slate in the Colonial Athletic Association. The Panthers host James Madison (March 7-9), Northeastern (March 28-30), William & Mary (April 4-6), Hofstra (April 25-27) and Delaware (May 2-4). Delaware finished tied for first in the regular season last year, and the Blue Hens are picked to finish fourth this year in the preseason poll.

State hits the road to visit George Mason (March 14-16), VCU (March 21-23), UNC Wilmington (April 11-13), Old Dominion (May 9-11) and Towson (May 15-18). VCU won the CAA Tournament a year ago, and is picked second in the 2008 CAA Preseason Poll. Old Dominion will open the season ranked in the top 25, and finished in a four-way tie atop the league last year.

"The CAA is a very competitive league. Each weekend that you play, you must play well or you could lose the series. The travel alone makes the CAA a great challenge because you have different types of field conditions: turf, natural grass. You have big stadiums, and you have small venues.

"In the end, the most consistent teams show up in the tournament. Our goal is to compete for the CAA championship. We will set out to win the CAA, but you have got to get into the tournament as one of those six teams," said Frady.

After clinching a berth in conference tournament on the final weekend in 2007, Frady and the Panthers know they have a tough battle ahead of them. But the coach is optimistic about his chances. "If hard work, having the right attitude and an optimistic outlook amongst the players and coaches is vital to success, then we've got it going in the right direction," said Frady.
