Panthers Continuing Climbing Towards the Big Show

As Major League organizations head into spring training for the 2009 season, five former Panthers are still active in the minor leagues - three position players and two pitchers.

Since 1980, when Russell Eagle became the first Panther drafted, 34 players have gone on to play professional baseball.

At least one Panther has signed with a Major League team for six consecutive seasons (2003-present). In 13 of the last 14 years, a Georgia State player has signed with a Major League organization.

In 2005, Brett Strickland and Ben Rulon made Georgia State history. The pair became the first Panther teammates selected in the same draft. Charlie Pelt and Luke Gordon repeated the feat in 2007.

Two former Panthers have reached the AAA level. Mark Mortimer played for the Richmond Braves of the International League in 2000, while Scott Youngbauer played for the Tacoma Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League in 2006.
